

HOW TO READ YOUR AIRLINE TICKET

Your airline ticket is your contract between you and your airline. It may be to your advantage to know the following:

A - This field is the airline that your ticket was issued by, usually it represents the airline that your flying on Domestically, or it will be the airline that takes you "trans-Pacific" or "trans-Atlantic" to international destinations.

B - This field should be your legal name, as it would appear on your passport or other ID.

C - This field is for ticket restrictions.

D - This field is normally the airfare amount paid for your airline ticket, including all taxes and airline fees. At Explorica this does not always reflect what we paid for the ticket. Our ticket prices and some taxes are usually hidden or modified as seen on the face of the ticket or the receipt, according to our contract requirements.

E - This field is "PNR" (passenger name record) at Explorica this would be our reservation number in Amadeus. It is also known as a "record locator"

F - This field is the date your ticket was issued.

G - This field is your ticket number.

H - This field usually contains your "Frequent Flyer" number.

I – This area used to be used as a boarding pass before the “Electronic ticket era.” You can no longer use it as a boarding pass but you can see some details regarding your flight itinerary.
